Heluna Health is proud to offer enhanced nutrition and breastfeeding support services to help clinical providers meet patient needs and improve health equity in high-need communities. For over forty years, our expert staff of culturally competent Registered Dietitian Nutritionists (RDNs) have been providing culturally-appropriate support through our WIC (Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants, and Children) program. Whether you're looking to serve your patients in person or through a telehealth platform, we can work with you to customize a plan for your site or an entire network.

Nutrition Counseling in Community Clinics

Our culturally-trained RDNs provide individualized nutrition counseling to patients living with obesity, diabetes, cardiovascular disease, kidney failure, and other medical conditions that meets them where they are at. Research* has shown that nutrition therapy interventions by RDNs can help to lessen chronic disease risk, slow disease progression and reduce symptoms. Nutrition counseling can reduce the need for medication, which can result in fewer doctor visits, less hospitalizations, and lower overall health care costs.
